THE CENTENNIAL NUMBER

THE accompanying pictures only partially represent the developments of a century in Springfield's High School education. The little building of 1828, pictured above, is the parent of the Springfield High Schools of 1928. Housing some three score pupils and with a single instructor, it satisfied the needs of a less complex day, and was even regarded as something of an extravagance. The work which it undertook is now being conducted in three well equipped, crowded buildings any one of which could house the parent institution in its assembly hall.

Central High School is the direct linial descendant of the Springfield High School of 1828, and was, indeed, simply the High School when the present building was erected in 1897. With the increasing complexity of American life and with a rapidly increasing High School population came the need of a more diversified training. The Technical High School, built in 1905, ministered to the needs of a particular group while the Commercial High School, which originated as a separate department in this building, was given its new home in 1915.

Central today, in the one hundredth year of its existence, continues the work of general cultural training and college preparation once regarded as the only necessary and proper function of the High School.

History of the Class of 1927 $\frac{1}{2}$

Back in the dim, distant past, we arrived at Central. Save for a few of us, this was a strange and pathless wilderness, peopled by cannibals of various degrees of ferocity; namely, the teachers. Besides them, other savages inhabited the building; these were members of the tribe of upperclassmen. In our first classes, we learned that they were quite harmless after all. After passing through the strange ritual, the making out of our programs for the first time, we felt that we were really Centralites. Then after what seemed two or three days, we became possessed of the ability to vote, and elected Bill Lieson our freshman president. After another short time, we reached the day of reckoning, the last day of the semester.

Coming back from our vacations, we made the acquaintance of the portables and forthwith began coining adjectives indicating our disgust. We also took on a new dignity; we could look down on the incoming frosh. Having gained the necessary, we gave a social, which, as a social, was a success. At this time those of us who were taking Latin came across that learned and able talker, Cicero, and promptly wished that he had been choked while yet a child.

After the smoke of battle had cleared (2B Elections) and the last vote counted, Al Garipey became president. We then gave our never-to-be-forgotten 2B Social, which in our estimation, was a huge success. Having now advanced in age and abilities, we were able to use without blushing the excuses, "I was sick and couldn't do it," or "The page was torn out of the book."

When this semester was laid away and we had become 2A's, we found ourselves past the social stage; so we indulged in a JUNIOR PROM. George Cavanaugh, who has the honor of having been in most of Central's one hundred classes, served as chairman of the committee. Our class gift to the school consisted of the beautiful "Chorus Contest Trophy" which was presented at the second semi-annual contest. At this time, we became real upperclassmen, at least in our own opinion, and were also getting more and more envious of the senior seats in the Assembly Hall, as yet a year's time distant.

Imagine, dear reader, our feelings when we became 3B's. To make a long story short, we gave the 3B Fiesta with Blondy Collins as chairman of the committee assisted by "Sissy" Studley, "Peg" Merritt, "Dude" Hubbard, "Poetess" Hiland, "Noisy" Converse, and others. Yet during all this time, we could but look more covetously on the seats of the seniors.

Time passed. Then behold, we were able to call ourselves seniors. But we soon found out that all was not to be milk and honey. We had to spend money so fast on about ten million things that a dollar appeared about as big as Mt. Everest to most of us. Our pictures were taken, and on the return of the proofs, WOW! all the self esteem we had ever had was lost. That cost money; then class dues don't help the purse any, and the demand for us to buy tickets to the football games found us nearly broke. But we were glad we had quarters for the Tech game, which brought the Football Championship home to Central. The proceeds which resulted from the sale of the Football Megaphones helped to swell our treasury. Next, our last dance was given, with Phil Connell as chairman of the committee. Central was out "en-force" to help celebrate our Football Championship, and with the help of "Irv Guyer's Orchestra" furnishing the music for the dance, and the School Band for the parade, a gorgeous time was had by all. Then we began to plan for the Blue and Whites, for Shakespeare's big murder play, "Julius Caesar," the Banquet, Graduation, and last, the glorious PROM.

As the historian closes, he finds pleasure in reflecting that after all we didn't make such a very bad record individually and as a class.

KENNETH LE MERE

Presentation of the Class of 1927 $\frac{1}{2}$

Fred Ober—Fred, we feel that your capable management of the class pictures, in spite of all your trials and tribulations, deserves a substantial reward. Therefore, we're presenting you with this camera to set you up in the business in the basement of Woolworth's Department Store.

Gert Campbell—Gert, your cunning hand has aided in the advertising of many school dances. However, we hear that we are not the only members of the school who think your hand is cunning. Gertrude, here are some gloves.

Oh Don—(on way up to stage)—Who'll give me sixty-sixty-sixty—going for fifty. Going-Going-Gone, and how Don went! All that remains is to discover the thief of the rubber cake that was supposed to bounce.

Don, may I present you with a parachute for future descents from an auction block?

Nat Converse and Ray Johnson—You two are the noisiest kids that ever strolled thru' Central's Corridors; and as this is your last day in Central, we want you to enjoy yourselves and keep up your reputation as noisiest boy and girl, so here's to you, (megaphone and small horn).

Dave Cosgriff and John Martin—Folks, here are two bashful boys. I think I may safely say that this class is interested in the welfare of its members, so in behalf of the class, I present you with one volume on How to Win the Way to a Woman's Heart.

Betty Herrick—Betty, your career in Central has left in its wake numerous broken hearts. We fear these hearts may be of a revengeful turn, so we beg that you will accept this curling iron. Remember, Betty, whenever there is danger, always wave your hair!

Perhaps for a few moments the caretakers of our class baby will untie their apron strings and allow Kenneth Rice to enter our midst—Milk bottles, toys and candy are all too common for such as you! Blocks are said to be educational and inasmuch as you are really graduating, we decided to give you something which every baby craves (blocks).

If anyone can bring Dot Sheldon out of her habitual trance for a minute, will he please propel her towards the stage—Dot, you've kept us guessing for three long years as to what you were thinking about. Now we've given up and decided to put a stop to this aloof placidity of those eyes. Here's a bomb to upset that complacency. It's set to go off in a few seconds. Please take it outside and if it works, come back and tell us.

John Keefe—John, you have one of those soft, melodious voices that can't be heard across the class-room: so we give you this megaphone to use when you go to the higher institution of learning.

Virginia Donald—Your vocabulary is unequalled by any other within the halls of Central. Here is a copy of Webster's Dictionary. Look it over, for we're told they added a new word the other day. We trust that no obfuscating interruptions will occur during your perusal of said document.

Henry Hewitt—Henry, we all know that you are our silent lover, and we hope that in the future you will have more courage to declare yourself. Here's a box of "PEP" to spur you on.

Gwen Morgan—Gwen, you have one of the biggest grins in the Class of '27½. We hereby present you with one of Kresge's best yard measures. When you get home, measure that grin of yours and tell us the result.

Laurence Hubbard—When it comes to bluffing, you are incomparable. We're not sure just what gets you by, Laurence, tho' we think it is—well, we won't give you away; but here is a little extra soft soap, in case you're ever at a loss.

The next offender being a worthy victim, will Karl Schwenger please mount the steps on the right—Karl, your downheartedness after the sixth period has been carefully and cleverly traced to the fact that Dot has failed to appear. Feeling sorry for you, we have contrived a way in which you may always have a Dot with you (cardboard with a large dot in the center).

Hubie Wilson and Rosamund Goodwin—You two cause more traffic complications in Central's Halls than ten perspiring traffic cops could ever hope to manage—and all because you don't observe the parking regulations. After due deliberation, we hit upon a plan. Here she is! (a toy car). Now you can take Rosie anywhere, Hubie, to park in the middle of Main Street with our blessing.

Mildred O'Neal—Now don't blush, Mildred! Oh there you go. It would be a crime to ever lose such a becoming habit—so here's a box of rouge to help you out.

Wilma Fellows—Billie, you've entertained us with your dainty feet innumerable times in the last three years. Please take this little dancer; and sometimes, years from now, look at her and remember how good you've been to us.

Peg Hiland—Peg, you are so very attractive that we know you are continually bothered with pick-ups. It must be embarrassing, so please accept this masher which will be less of a bother and more of a help.

Charley Collins—Your halo of red has been the object of much concern in Central, because of its resemblance to a wild fire. Here is something to extinguish both the fire and the anxiety of your many friends (package of green dye).

Thelma Burlingame—We have heard of and also noticed the collection of rings, pins, etc. which you have received from the various colleges and prep. schools. Wishing to give you something different and still keep it in your line, we are bestowing upon you this dignified and worthy pin (horse-blanket pin).

Alice Johnston—Among your various and charming accomplishments, Alice, we have found out that you play the violin. Please accept this miniature fiddle in remembrance of all the things you have done for us.

Prophecy of the Class of 1927¹/₂

While I was in Boston a week or so ago, my hostess invited me to go with her to see a crystal gazer who has been creating quite a stir there recently. I was delighted with the idea, since it was a new experience to me. We drove to Scollay Square and then thru a veritable labyrinth of short, crooked streets before we finally stopped in front of the dingiest hovel I have ever entered. It was no more in keeping with my conception, gleaned from the movies, of what a medium's rooms ought to be than Buckingham Palace. However, my enthusiasm suffered only slightly, and we pushed the only thing we found which resembled a doorbell. A glum Jap admitted us. We followed him up some rickety, squeaky stairs and finally landed in a windowless room whose only light shone directly on a flawless crystal. Skeptical as I was of its powers, I could not suppress an expression of admiration. My voice came back from the walls and died down with an eerie whine which set me shivering. I was assisted into a chair before the glowing crystal. A voice spoke opposite me. I looked. I started, and sucked in my breath. There sat Grandpa Wu, himself. He promised that the crystal would reveal to me anything I might desire. I stammered something about the future of my classmates. The sight of him was enough to fire my imagination into a receptive condition. My eyes fell to the crystal. It quivered and grew. Larger and larger, until I felt my self enveloped. The room had faded. I was in a world of my own, bright and clear, except for a wisp of smoke which seemed to have no fire. The smoke wavered before me, and took a vague, human form. It had no features, except one huge, unblinking green eye. It addressed me thusly:—

"What do you seek?"

"Who are you?" I quavered.

"I am the Soul of the crystal—what do you seek?"

"The future of my classmates," I replied.

"Attend; your wish is granted,—who shall be first?"

"Al Gariepy."

"He shall be a radio announcer. He shall broadcast events where speed and directness of speech are essential. He shall be famous, also, for the daintiness of his fancy needlework. From his station on Static Island, New York, Catherine Hayes and Charles Killmer will sing weekly with Frances Zirkin as their accompanist."

"Landon Head."

"He shall be inventor of a new starch for West Pointers' dress trousers, that they may not suffer from vagrant wrinkles and dirt at inspection. A monument by the sculptor, Henry Hewitt, will be erected to him by the later cadets, as the man who took the specks out of inspection."

"Carol Mather."

"She will be famous on the stage for her 'Chaney-isms.' In her spare time she will write testimonials for 'Plucky Tripe' cigarettes, using her melodious stage voice to bear out her statements."

"What about Charles Collins?"

"A very bright young man, he. He shall teach philosophy at Smartmouth College. He will know absolutely nothing about his subject, but he will bluff his pupils so well that they will really gain a comprehensive knowledge of the course."

"What is Thelma Burlingame's future?"

"She will be the founder of a museum of curios. Her Institution will contain the best known and most complete collection in the country of pins, rings and lockets representing all the leading colleges."

"Surely Ray Johnson will be one of the Big Noises of the day."

"Yes, he will be owner and ballyhoo man of a travelling show which will feature several of your classmates. Gertrude Campbell, Wilma Fellows, Winifred Marsden, Dorothy Sheldon, Bessie Smith and Alice Johnston will be billed as 'The Popisinski Sisters' Chorus.' Don Notman will be the real Star of their dances, and having attracted attention by his antics, will auction off cake. He will fall hard for every pretty girl in his audiences. Fred Ober and Robert Levin will be the two clowns."

"Will Dave Cosgriff be an athletic coach?"

"No; he, Kenneth LeMere and John Martin will spend most of their time in jail on complaints of "mashing." Judge Elizabeth Hudson will sentence them severely because of the boldness of their advances."

"And that inseparable pair, Carla Melander and Frances Rose?"

"Kenneth Rice, President of the United States of America will confer upon them the Singer Osinsky Medal for the Restraint of Crime for their brilliance in running down Margaret Smith and Mildred O'Neal, bootleggers extraordinary."

"What mischief will my old friend, Virginia Donald, be up to?"

"She will be the recognized dictator of Ladies' Fashions in America. She will publish her decrees thru Philip Connell's Ladies' Magazine. This periodical will also feature Laurence Hubbard's page of 'Advice to Young Girls.'"

"What lies in store for Betty Herrick?"

"For four years she will hold the title of 'Heavyweight Boxing Champion' of Chinatown. She will lose her crown to William Lieson."

As the Soul of the Crystal had been telling me these things, its eye had gleamed more and more brilliantly, until the whole glassy nothingness in which I seemed to be suspended had become green. It was like floating in the heart of an emerald. When it seemed as if the color could not become any more intense, it rapidly faded, and I was alone in my world of Crystal. Then, even this dwindled until it was just a beautiful glass ball in my hands. I was back in the dark little room with Grandpa Wu and my friend, just as if nothing had happened. You can imagine my astonishment when I looked at my watch to find that all this had happened in the course of eight minutes.

And now, my most worthy and admirable classmates, if you believe this story, I'm a better fibber than I thought I was.

Excerpt from the CENTRAL RECORDER of January 16, 1957

CENTRAL GRADUATE WINS HIGH HONORS

Again Central has scored a hit in the big field of life! Here is its latest triumph. Natalie Converse of the Class of 1927½ has been appointed by President Rice as head of the national department of Domestic Service, which was established last year after the eighteenth amendment was repealed.

Miss Converse—she keeps her maiden name, although she has been married at least a dozen times—will be able virtually to control the country's diet. She started her training the year after her graduation from Central, when, feeling it her duty to do her bit in this great world of ours, she entered as a waitress in Van Heusen's Sweet Shop. After she was fired from there, Miss Converse went to President Hoover, one of her numerous ex-father-in-laws, and he got her a job in the White House cafeteria founded March 1, 1929 by "Clever Cal." Here Miss Converse, by the aid of a correspondence course, raised her position to that of head cigarette girl—a much sought after position. Feeling, nevertheless, that this was not her true place in life, our Natalie resigned only to become, somewhat later, manager of a popular Washington Cafeteria.

In 1916 she became president of the Schrafft stores in New York City, the finest chain restaurants in America. From here she was recalled to Washington, where she assumed management of the Coat checkers', Dish washers' and Taxi-starters' Union. It was from this high position that President

Rice chose her as a member of his cabinet, the first female ever to hold such a distinguished office. From her career thus briefly outlined herein, it may be seen that Miss Converse has been trained for her position by much valuable experience both in menial and executive positions. She attributes her success to close adherence to the principle of her motto, which in a slightly different form is the traditional one at Central: "Nobody has the right to cook that which if everyone ate would destroy society." With such a motto as this, no one could go wrong.

All hail to our Natalie! and may the sweet (?) children in our cooking classes look up to her in awe and mutter with determination:

"We will be like you, our heroine! If you can, we, too, can."

FREDERICK OBER

Class Poem

The gates of youth are open flung: Life's challenge is at hand!

We face the world at last, with, thanks to you, our future planned.

Forever, on our list of pleasures past, your name will stand

First in our memory, Central High.

For three long years, happy within your walls we've worked and played.

Because of you, we go to meet the future unafraid.

All who are blessed with your firm guidance, as we were, are made

Friends to the last of Central High.

Our loyalty is everlasting as the blue above.

Our hearts are bright as gold is with a never-dying love,

To "Twenty-seven and a half" through Blue and Gold, you'll prove

First, last, and always, Central High.

MARGARET HILAND

Will of the Class of 1927 $\frac{1}{2}$

We, the class of 1927 $\frac{1}{2}$, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight, and of the foundation of Central High School, the one hundredth, being in full and complete possession of faculties of mind and body, to the end that we may leave the portals of Central High School in good standing, do therefore publicly proclaim this document to be our last will and testament.

ARTICLE I. We hereby appoint as our executors Miss Marion C. Murphy and Miss Georgia E. Lyon.

ARTICLE II. Fearing that this famous school will totter without our support, we leave Bill MacMartin as one of the permanent landmarks of Central.

ARTICLE III. To Mr. Hess, we leave a portrait of Darwin's Missing Link in order that scientific research may be furthered in connecting the monkey with his art gallery.

ARTICLE IV. Inasmuch as the majority of this illustrious class is said to be of the curious sex, we leave Natalie Converse's nerve and noise to George Cavanaugh, just to see if he can use any more nerve and noise than he already possesses.

ARTICLE V. Don Notman, "Singer" Osinski, Phil Connell and Dave Cosgriff leave their ability for making brilliant passes, runs, and tackles, to all underclassmen, who may thus retain for Central the championship which '27 $\frac{1}{2}$ helped to win.

ARTICLE VI. To the class of 1928 we donate our long envied seats with fond hopes that they too may succeed in winning the compliment Miss Clark made to '27 $\frac{1}{2}$.

ARTICLE VII. As we have all encountered Milton's famous poems during our English 8 courses, we wish to leave Kenneth LeMere's Il Penseroso mood to Richard Good so that Dick may thus be prevented from breaking Mr. MacDuffie's record as an inhabitant of Central.

ARTICLE VIII. Carol Mather bequeaths her popularity and ability to do a good job on any committee to Bobbie Beckwith.

ARTICLE IX. Laummie Hubbard, realizing that Central without a dude would be as interesting as a frat dance without a girl, leaves his title to Doug Ellis.

ARTICLE X. To Buzz Studley, we confer the honor of Don Notman's reputation for L'Allegro, as he is the best candidate for the office after the exit of Don's sunny smile.

ARTICLE XI. Marion Skinner leaves some of her surplus size to Tiny Kinsella so that Tiny may discard those dangerous French heels and yet look down on men in the future instead of up to them.

ARTICLE XII. Charley Collins, the teacher's pest, bequeaths his astounding bluffing ability to Harry Dickinson to help him succeed in winning a far distant diploma.

ARTICLE XIII. Inasmuch as we have lately missed the so-called eyesore of Central, namely the missing portable, we provide a committee to protest in behalf of the Freshmen who have never had the pleasure of madly rushing from one to the other during a thunder storm.

ARTICLE XIV. Betty Herrick leaves her title as the most beautiful girl in '27½ to Bobbie Beatty in order that Bobbie may try to keep the title in the family also.

ARTICLE VI. Al Gariepy leaves his ability to put things across, alone and unaided, to Fred Hillman, budding Toreador and helmsman of the Class of 1929.

ARTICLE XVI. We, the Class of 1927½ having struggled through three years of baked beans on Friday and bean soup on Monday, do leave to the Lunch Department of Central High School three hundred and sixty-five varied menus and thus prevent a monotonous menu for other Centralites.

ARTICLE XVII. In consideration of his throat, we leave to Mr. Hill a gross of phonograph records entitled Nobody has a right— and Two things are necessary for a good performance—.

ARTICLE XVIII. To the Science Hall we leave a supply of footpads so that the studious Centralites may study while the wanderlust seizes inhabitants of back seats.

ARTICLE XIX. Peg Hiland leaves her ability for writing lyric poetry to whoever wishes to aspire to this seat of honor.

ARTICLE XX. Dorrice Strong leaves her little giggles to Betty Reid who will now predominate in the field of mirth.

ARTICLE XXI. To Central we leave long needed keyless lockers in hopes that the mob will not continue to collect in front of Mr. Hess's room on the first and last days of school.

ARTICLE XXII. To Julia Prindle, Winnie Marsden leaves her title: The Perfect Flapper.

ARTICLE XXIII. Bessie Smith leaves her dimples to Marion Corson, who will now have to display them.

ARTICLE XXIV. To fond lovers, we leave the space behind lockers, which Landon Head has left for their tete-a-tetes.

ARTICLE XXV. To Hec Reid, we leave our best wishes for another football championship next year.

ARTICLE XXVI. Wilma Fellows leaves her winsome smile and pleasing personality to Peg Hartt.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, WE have signed and declared this instrument our last will and testament, on this twenty-fifth day of January, 1928.

Signed: ALPHONSE GARIEPY

Signed, published, and declared by the above-named President as and for the last will and testament of the Class of 1927½, on this twenty-fifth day of January, 1928, in the presence of us who have signed as witnesses to the same.

History of the Class of 1928

Drifting lazily through the ether, "The Spirit of 1928," piloted by two little pieces of Lindbergher cheese, Mike and Ike, arrived in Springfield in the golden autumn of the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and twenty five. Leaning from the cockpit, Mike perceived far below them the portals of Central High School.

"What is this I see before me?" cried Mike, "Is it, perchance, a Sunday School picnic, or think you an orphan asylum on an outing?"

"Aha," quoth Ike, "before you lies 'the best school in the solar system', and yon host of unworldly youngsters is merely a new 1B class. Shall we hover above them in our pea-green plane and watch them for an eon or two?"

"Agreed," spake th' illustrious Ike. "So be it."

"Look," began Mike, "they have already organized their class. They seem to be conducting themselves like model little freshmen."

"Sure enough, they've chosen that handsome Gage chap for their president, little Frank Broeker for their vice-president, clever Harrison Clapp for their secretary, chubby Ted Blackmun for their treasurer, and pretty Barbara Beatty for their member-at-large. Not such a bad class," spake the noble Ike.

"Why are those girls and boys yonder standing against those gym walls?" asked Mike wonderingly.

"Well I never, that's their first dance, the 1A social. Aren't the shy little dears cute?" said Ike.

"Vacation already!" cried Mike suddenly. "This year has surely sped by. Well, let's take a turn around the block in the plane while we're waiting for them to start in again."

"Oh Ike," cried Mike in the first days of the new year as the pea-green plane sped thro' the air, "who is that I see down there surrounded by so many rejoicing friends and football fans?"

"Methinks," replied Ike, "'tis the 'little Turk' who has just been elected President of '28; and yonder is the Vice-President, sweet Marie Dow, whose melting brown eyes wrought such havoc in the hearts of men. And behold, there are the other illustrious officers: Harrison Clapp, Barbara Beatty, and—"

"And that scoundrelly guardian of '28's gold ducats who charges me twice for dues tho' I'll always swear I paid them the first time," squeaked Pinkie, the Mascot, in an injured tone.

"Mice should be seen and not heard," sternly reprimanded Mike.

Pinkie's eyes gleamed dangerously.

In their course, the two little pieces of cheese saw in turn the 2B social, where shy youths and maidens modestly lined the walls while a few gaily danced on the spacious floor; and the Central assembly hall packed to the doors to hear Leonard Salter debate on the imminent question of prohibition in the Amherst Cup debate.

At length the noble Mike called out, "Quick! Give me the opera glasses. I think we are passing over Japan."

"Let me see," piped Pinkie.

"Hush, you mouse," said Ike.

And again Pinkie's eye gleamed dangerously.

"Wrong again," answered Ike, as he looked thro' the "shur-see" opera glasses. "It's only the Junior Prom; but see how gaily the green lantern decorations flutter in the breeze, while Old King Cole with his merry Fiddlers beams on the happy dancers."

By this time the two cheesies were quite exhausted from their extensive voyaging and were glad enough to cuddle down in their little green plane and fall asleep for the summer.

Mike, coming to life again after his summer's rest, found the glorious class of '28 setting out with its new officers. Harlow Gage, the popular leader of the Freshman year, again sat in the president's chair; and efficient Wallie Brooslin, elected after many re-votes, assisted him as vice-president. For the third time Harrison Clapp had been elected secretary, Edward Blackmun treasurer, and Barbara Beatty member-at-large.

For now they were the SENIORS, proudly conscious of their new dignity, but nevertheless painfully aware of the flatness of their purses.

"Odear, odear," began Mike, "I'm glad I never had to graduate—it seems to be so hard on one's pocketbook; but, if the fates decree it, this Football Dance I hear noise of will clear the skies."

But alas, the rains descended, and the floods came, and verily the Football Dance was completely submerged.

"Shall our noble class of '28 suffer defeat?" spake Ike. "Perish the thought!"

"Get to work down there, twenty-eighters, and help Lilly sell the Christmas cards and all that candy. Hurrah, Ike, they've done nobly!" (Before they were discovered purveying sweets by the powers that be).

"Behold, Mike. If my eyes deceive me not, yon valiant array of husky football heroes has, indeed, captured the interschool championship! And has our glorious class anything to do with it? By the Great Horn Spoon, I should say so!"

"Whose is the face of the smiling captain, but our Buzz Studley's; and there's Vinnie (himself) as big as life. And verily the squad has its share of seniors on it; lo, Sonny Boyajy, Don Wyman, Hubie Wilson, Johnnie Mohler, Doug Ellis, and Harlow Gage."

"Aye, Mike, and do you note that truly we have the captains of all the teams in our class? The mighty Four: Buzz Studley, Johnnie Mohler (Basketball), Wallie Brooslin (Soccer), and Hubie Wilson (Baseball)."

"Aha," cried Mike, casting his eagle eyes in another direction. "'Twenty-eight' has taken the oratory! By their spirited addresses, declaimed from Central's stage, the members of the class have carried away their laurels."

"Yea, verily. In the 3B speaking contest I see Edward Arslan and Eleanore Barris tied for first place. In Pierides, Marion Corson has carried away the honors; and, in the Senate Tablet Debate, Harrison Clapp has argued his way to fame."

"Just between you and me and the propeller, Ike old dear, this isn't such a bad class we've hitched up to at that, in spite of the slams in the Recorder forum. But let's get down to business again."

"Look, look, Mike, 'we girls' are having a card party! Great! That certainly fills the coffers with golden shekels—30 whole dollars!"

"Who's the guardian angel man (he with the red hair) that seems to be steering the class? Oh I guess he's the other half of 'we girls'."

"Ods Bodskins, Mike, I'm getting terribly seasick. The plane is pitching wildly. What are all the storm clouds in the air?"

"A class meeting! Help! (and then some), Murder! (pretty near), War! (and how!). Oh, this is terrible. The air is positively smoky!"

"A revolt against the labors of the honorable nominating committee, methinks, but it seems to be subsiding now, thank goodness."

"No chance to go to sleep though, old dear. Everyone in turn seems to be arrayed in his best bib and tucker. Methinks they're getting their pictures taken."

"Well, when they get over the shock of seeing how they really look, maybe they'll think of studying so they can graduate with their class."

"Oh Ikie, I'm all tuckered out! Let's take a nap," said Mike with a sigh.

No sooner said than done, and, putting their little heads together, they dreamed thus:

They saw the merry members of '28 bouncing about the gym in Knickers and Sport Sweaters, for this was the 3A dance, resembling in its gay attire, a carnival of sports.

Then, before the eyes of a delighted audience, the production of the opera "Bohemian Girl" brought glory to the class.

In a fine performance, the class distinguished itself in the senior play as in everything.

Soon they heard a slosh, slosh, and, coming nearer, they saw the members of '28 eating soup at their scrumptious banquet. Everyone seemed to be enjoying himself, from Eunice Dietz, who was daintily nibbling a piece of cake, to Vinnie, who, with a large napkin knotted at the back of his neck, was busily consuming yards of slippery spaghetti.

The scene changes, and behold the auditorium, glowing with bright lights and scintillating with gay music, as sweet girl graduates with their handsome escorts dance blithely by.

And now the dream is ended, and only a faint odoriferous perfume lingers on, as Pinkie, alone in the cockpit, drives madly on, with a satisfied smile on his smug little snout.

Presentation of the Class of 1928

SCENE:—A farmer runs around the stage with a wheelbarrow, obviously trying to catch some falling object not seen by the audience. Suddenly Vinnie Tremonti, dressed as an aviator, lands with several thuds on the stage, and of course Buzz has missed him with the wheelbarrow and Vinnie is mad. He has completed a perfect (?) parachute jump, the parachute being an old umbrella. The farmer looks disappointed.

Buzz: Gol dern, I ain't missed one of yew fellers in two years. Hev an accident?

VIN: No thanks, just had one (sarcastically).

Buzz: Whar wuz ye goin'?

VIN: I was rushing some important papers to some class day exercises when my motor failed me, and here I am. I had to resort to my parachute.

Buzz: So I seed, and, dern ye, ye've stampeded both my cattle.

VIN: I'm sorry. By the way can you tell where I can find the Central High School? I must get these papers there as soon as possible.

Buzz: I sartin' can. My son Josh, great boy, Josh, he goes there, and he's a-graduat' from that place terday. I'm a-goin' to read them presentations meself.

VIN: (bored) That is what I have here with me. Good, I can help you.

Buzz: Wal we'll see.

Five Hours Later

SCENE: At the class day exercises.

Enter the farmer dressed in his go-to-meetin' clothes and the aviator.

Buzz: Wal, I swan! Right nice place they got here, ain't it? And here we be. Let's get a-goin'!

PRESENTATIONS

1. Will Betty Reid please hobble forward? Betty, we hear ye be the noisiest girl in the class. We bought this here little trinket, cost five cents too, and we hope it will give the rest of your classmates a chance to make themselves heard. It's a gag and ye are to wear it on all occasions.

2. Is Eleny Hannigan able to get up here? Eleny gal, we heered tell that ye are the most talkative little gal in the class, but your style is cramped by the sad fact that your vocabulary is limited to a bare 40,000 words. Naow this here Magic Book, what was written by a teacher feller way back when I went to school, may be of a little assistance. I guess there be in it a few words ye ain't seen yet.

3. Can Silent George Cavanaugh come forward? We finally decided to giv' ye suthin' that we thought would please ye tol'able, George,—so we're givin' ye this little token of nuthin' at all. (Much noise from off-stage—Vin enters with a cart of fireworks.) We hope these few noise-makers will aid ye in your career at Fordham if ye ever do get there.

4. Will Little Johnnie Mohler and Eleanore Barris please step forward? Children, owing to the shortage of full moons this spring, we have decided to take pity on you and present you with this made to order moon which Vin here has found to be very convenient on cloudy evenin's. And remember ye can't wear it out.

5. Will someone please lead Doug Ellis to the judgment seat? Douglass, we have noticed with envy your business-like selection and fine assortment of neckties of late,—but we have missed the added decoration in your upper pocket. Allow us to present you with this slight token. May it add further beauty to your already flaming youth! (Red handkerchief.)

6. Will Mary and Malcolm Foskit please wake up and step up here to the agony porch? Children, under pressure from the Chellis family, we have, at great expense, both to the class treasury and the class pride, purchased this new Ford roadster for your own prive use, with the hope that in the future, the Chellis may enjoy the use of their own car.

7. Marion Corson, and Harrison Clapp, would you kindly amble up here where the world may see you? Marion we take practically no pleasure at all in presenting to you this, the latest victim of your feminine wiles, (Presenting Harrison Clapp). Rice throwing by Vin and Buzz.

8. Jerry Locke, if you ain't busy, will you please step up here, and if you are, then will you please break and come here? Jerry, we realize that that cherubic complexion of yours is the envy of all your classmates—if you have any—. We wish no credit in presenting to you this second hand jar of slightly used palmolive tar soap. May it keep those childish blushes and that bloom of youth on those dainty baby cheeks of yours.

9. Dick Brown. . . Oh Dick. . . Yoo Hoo. . . come on over. Richard, you are the only living remnant of 200 love affairs. If we wanted to please you, we could only offer you as a graduation present a feminine heart for you to break, but we couldn't find a girl in the class who isn't wise to you; so of course we couldn't get you one. So we must pass to the next victim. However we just wanted the school to get a glimpse of our class's contribution to the world in the shape of a champion cartbreaker, or—pardon me—I mean heartbreaker.

10. Will the other Barris girl be persuaded to come forward or backward, but get here somehow? Evelyn, we tried hard to be nasty to you too, but we cannot think of anything to say about you that would not be complimentary. Since that isn't the order of the day, we will have to leave you with this pound of sugar and the hope that it will keep your disposition just as sweet in the future as it has been during your three years here at school, in spite of almost constant companionship with that sister of yours.

11. Nejib Kerchoo Boyajy—won't you please come over? Here he is, girls. The hero of the football team. Remember him in that game last fall? Ask him how he, single handed, tore through the Tech defense and, with ten men hanging on him, how he ran for the winning touchdown,—but you all remember that, don't you? Here is the little lad who has inspired all Horatio Alger's best books. We can't give him anything because personally we don't think he deserves it, but we had to take this opportunity to show you this magnificent specimen. Pass on, Boyajy, and make room for something worth while.

12. Mr. Wyman on the platform if you please. Donald, we understand that you are one of the best bluffers in the class and openly admit you have been able to bluff every teacher in the school except Miss Marr. Both you and Miss Marr are to be congratulated. We mingle with our pity for your teachers a feeling of awe at your rare ability. We wish you might have come into possession of this little handbook of Miss Marr's which tells of the higher points in the art of bluffing thru' History at a tender age.

Prophecy of the Class of 1928

ELLIS IN WONDERLAND

Ellis was bored stiff sitting by Mr. Smith who was tutoring him for a French exam. While he was doing some heavy thinking—he was thinking of his pet elephant—a pink rabbit with white eyes ran by him. There was nothing funny about that, but Ellis had to pinch himself when he heard the rabbit say, "Oh, deah, I've dropped my false teeth again. I'm petrified with fear lest I arrive tardily."

"Oh, it's just one of them talking dogs," said Doug. Then he remembered that talking dogs don't have false teeth. "Gosh, I better chase him and get him to sign a vaudeville contract. With my brains and his talent, we'd orter go over big," quoth he.

With that, he jumped up and started running. Unfortunately, the rabbit had disappeared. However, he ran in the direction whence the rabbit had gone. Suddenly he stopped and went—zoop!

"Oh, deah, I always said I wouldn't fall for anyone, and here I've did it," he groaned.

He hit earth (or something) with a thump and found himself sitting before a door adorned with a big sign, "Home for Ex-Graduates."

"Now how'm I going to get in here?" he wondered,

Then out of space appeared the rabbit hurrying past him. In his haste, he fell headlong over Doug's feet.

"What wretchedly huge pedal extremities some people have!" he muttered to himself.

Ellis felt hurt and distinctly small. In fact, the more he thought of it, the smaller he grew.

"The fresh thing!" he murmured. Then he looked up and saw that the keyhole was just his size now. With a leap and a bound, he hurled himself at it.

Hardly had he popped through the keyhole when Leonard Salter in a big blue bonnet accosted him.

"Gimme, gimme, gimme, admission, admission," he shouted holding out a hand which seemed to grow larger as Ellis looked at it.

To satisfy him, he presented Salter with the filling of his best tooth, which quieted him, as he let him go after biting the filling.

A little farther on, he saw a chastened individual, tied to a stake, wearing socks and a tie that had doubtless once been the color of a bull's antipathy. On his back was a placard saying, "Condemned to eternal silence."

"Why," said Ellis in amazement, "it's Central's own George Cavanaugh!"

The youth was watching in agony three damsels who were shouting, waving tomahawks, doing a war dance about him, and pulling his hair. They spoke in piercing tones, "Yu-hu, Douglas, old bean! No know um us? We're Miriam Clark, Vera Fuller, and Marie Dow, heap big braves!"

Ellis was so surprised he could only smile dazedly and hurry on, leaving the noisy trio.

Ellis walked on until he met a paint-smearing creature with wild hair and glaring eyes.

"Get out of my way. Can't you see I'm busy?" squawked the latter.

"What are you doing?"

"Doing? What do you think I'm doing? Can't you see?" pointing to a canvas easel with a delicately tinted fried egg painted on it.

"An ad for home-made eggs?"

"Eggs, Eggs, Eggs—my masterpiece sun-set!" shouted the artist who through the paint and grease turned out to be Mae Magriel.

Ellis fled precipitously. Suddenly before him bounced a vision. It was Harlow Gage in a red suit with a pink tie and purple shirt. He hopped on his left foot and snapped his fingers.

"Presto change!"

Immediately, he sported a yellow suit with green stripes, a blistering red tie, and an orange chemise.

S-z-z-z-z!

When the smoke cleared away, a green rag floated in the air. His color schemes had been too hot.

"Serves him right, he should wear Asbestos underwear," soliloquized Ellis.

Ellis followed his feet until he came to a huge building. Just as he entered, he saw Kendall Goodwyn on the stage decrying in loud tones the present generation. In his amazement Doug sat down suddenly and cast his eyes widely over the audience. Not far away from him sat Bob Lougee, that coquettish lassie of Doug's school days, smiling her prettiest at Aaron Cohen who was talking animatedly to her. And there sitting right beside Dougie was Marion Connell. She pointed to a young lady with lovely hair who sat on a platform at the side. "I'm so excited! Gladys Elmer is to be judge at this contest! You know her judgment is accepted as final." Harrison Clapp with a flowery speech introduced the next speaker who proved to be none other than Marion Corson. "This young lady is a friend of mine although I don't brag about it."

At this, Marion arose and threw him out of a convenient window.

"Go on," said the others languidly, "We haven't much time."

"Well," said Ellis, "I've got to hurry if I'm going to see everything in this 'burg'."

Passing on, Ellis came to a group gathered about and talking excitedly.

"Oh, you're just in time—the race hasn't begun yet," called out Tiny Kinsella, who towered over Douglas like a giant, having grown eight feet.

She proceeded to explain the details of the race. Everybody was to start running whenever he liked and to stop whenever he liked. It was a funny kind of a race, but everything was funny.

They started and after awhile Earle Hodgson, clad in a red bathing-suit and a green umbrella, shouted, "The race is over!"

Then came up the question of who had won. Ruth Blanchard and Sylvia Bloom started pulling each other's hair. Clifford Johnson announced that he had won because he had stopped first, never having started at all. Doris Doherty threw a brick at Rose Donlon as both wanted first prize.

Then Tiny, after much deep thinking, decided that everybody had won.

"Prizes, prizes!" clamored Grace Flaherty, knocking Castle Day over in her excitement.

"Let him give the prizes!" shouted Helen Labrovitz pointing to Ellis.

Ellis did not know what on earth to do. He felt in his pockets desperately, and his fingers closed on a package of moth-eaten Life-Savers.

"Here," he said, handing them over. May King made a mad dash at the package. Our hero, however, managed to save them and gave them to Dick Brown, who looked quite modest and quiet.

The Life-Savers just went around when broken up, although Ellis was left out.

Louis De Nucci pointed this out. Then Stanley Hosford went up and asked Ellis if he had nothing for himself. At that moment, one of the buttons on Ellis's coat fell off.

Hosford picked it up and presented it to him pompously. "Sir, I have the honor to present you with this beautiful, gold-plated button, strictly guaranteed."

Dorothy Day and Loretta Cormier clapped and hiccupped. The Life-Savers had fermented.

After the prizes had been consumed, everybody started talking at once. Ellis thought of his cat and said wistfully,

"Gee, I wisht Dinah was here. I'll bet she's lonesome."

When somebody asked who Dinah was, he said enthusiastically,

"Dinah's my cat. She's awfully quick and catches mice and birds—like that!" snapping his fingers.

The blue jay feather on Eileen Fitzgerald's hat shuddered, and she left quickly, saying she had a date.

Malcolm Foskit, whose fur coat was of suspicious material, yanked Mary Chellis away without a word.

Ellis's attention was distracted, however, when the Rabbit dashed by.

"Oh, the Duchess, the Duchess," he murmured, and seeing Ellis, said,

"Hey, there, go and get my rubbers!"

Ellis was rather surprised at his tone; so he stared him full in the face and found it was not a rabbit but Robert Ley, who was glaring at him savagely. Dazed, he made his way to the house a little way off and got a pair of rubbers trademarked Friedman & Golden, Our Rubbers Have Snap.

Just as Ellis hurried past the door, David Millett stepped out and said, "Woof!"

Ellis was quite startled and fell over Lloyd Bardach, who was writing Impressions of a Budding Youth.

He was quite good-natured about it until Wally Brooslin, star cameraman for the Cooley News, Inc., dashed up and took the picture of the two of them and rushed off to the City Jail to get pictures of the celebrities of the day, Eddie Boland, Barbara Atkins, and Mary McVeigh. Eddie had been taken in for breaking the peace—he wore such a loud neck-tie that it woke up the neighbors for three blocks around. Mary and Bobby were arrested for rioting in the streets. It seemed that Judge Arslan had sentenced Mary for twenty years hard labor when he saw Bobby's black eye; but when he saw that both of Mary's eyes were black, he gave the two of them a life sentence in Ding-Ding.

After Brooslin had gone, Ellis continued on his way until he came to a tiny fence with a house inside it. Just as he drew near, Naomi Adaskin rushed up on a velocipede and threw a piano labelled McGowan & Moody, Pianos Extra Strong for Home Use, into the doorway. Norton Long, clad in footman's attire, was sleeping tranquilly on the door-step; but he twitched impatiently as the piano flew over him.

Ellis followed the piano into the house; and there in the kitchen was sitting the Duchess. Ellis started. Why, it was Dorothea L. Walkner under the ducal head-dress. She was rocking back and forth, holding a child howling. "Oh, I want my dear father!" Ellis looked at the infant and discovered that it was Marjorie Parker.

Lillian Pumphrey was cooking something with various pots and pans and there was a decided flavor of pepper in the air.

"Achoo!" said Ellis.

"You might chop his head off," remarked the Duchess to the cook.

Ellis glanced anxiously at the cook. However, she was not thinking of him, for she had started throwing pots and pans around.

In the middle of the confusion, Ellis suddenly noticed a cat smiling at him. As he looked, the cat's teeth got larger.

"My goodness me, where did you come from?" asked Ellis curiously.

"Yes, I make a lot of money advertising Peppo-Dento toothpaste," said the cat who was not a cat at all, but Alberta Potter.

Just then Helen Scannell strolled through the kitchen. A minute later a swarm of hungry-looking dogs and cats followed.

"Elinor Grin said she was 'It'," remarked the Cat, I mean Alberta, "so naturally she's very popular!"

After a few more pots and pans had flown about, Ellis decided that the atmosphere was not healthy. So he hurried out past the snoring footman.

Hardly had he got clear of the house when he ran into Johnnie Mohler waving a stick.

It proved he was waving his stick at Mary Hallahan and Imelda Macey.

"'Tenshun,' class! Deep breath and say

'AH.' 1-2-3-4-5-6- Hey, what's the matter?" he asked Imelda Macey.

"Ach, I'm dying," she squawked. "You and your bum Daily Dozen class—Ach, I have swallowed mine uppers!"

Mary picked her up and shook her until the teeth rattled on to the ground.

Passing on, Ellis nearly tripped over Anna Buckley and Helen LaRose who were sniffing the grass and staring at the ground through microscopes.

"Watcha looking for?" asked Ellis.

"HORSEFEATHERS!" they chorused.

Rather insulted by this reply, Ellis went on, only to be accosted by Lilly Hunter carrying a huge pencil, a gigantic note-book, and a pile of tickets.

"Do-ya-wanna buy some tickets for the Pilgrian-Clark concert? It's the great movement of the 13th Symphony—last time it was played even the grand piano got moved."

"Oh, no, I can't, really—I haven't any money. Oh, no, thanks most awfully," said Ellis rather embarrassed.

"Off with his head," said Lilly to Jean Golden who rushed out with a huge meat-chopper.

Ellis fled precipitously. Finally, he espied a tea table all laid for a big party under a great elm. There were, however, only a few people sitting at the table.

Ned Boyajy was sound asleep, and Hubert Wilson and Elena Hannigan were resting their elbows on his ribs, but he did not seem to mind.

No one noticed Ellis as he came up and sat down.

"AndohmydearIwassothrilledhe'sjustthe cutestboyyou'veeverseenyou'djustadorehim ifyouknewhimandhesayssthefunniestthings blabblabblabblab."

"You talk too much," said Wilson, yawning. "perhaps—ugh—I had better chop your head off."

Just then a ball bounced, shrieking with terror, over the table. In a flash, Buzz Studley in tennis togs bounded over the table after it.

"SACRAY NUM—hist, thou son of a dog," he stuttered, "come back here—how can I win the tournament, MA FWA. if you DON'T come back here? MUN DOO!"

Squaking thus, he disappeared in the distance.

Ellis finally got tired of sitting at the table where nobody noticed him or gave him something to eat. So he got up and went off. After he had gone a little way, he met Herbert Naurison, Eva Munger, and Morton Naurison jumping rope.

Ellis would have stopped and jumped rope, but suddenly he saw a door in one of the trees. He rushed eagerly to it and entered. Inside, he found himself in a little passage which led to a beautiful garden.

As Ellis came into the garden, he saw Hyman Golub, Charles Gray, and Julian Griffin arguing excitedly around an onion plant.

"It was all your fault," Gray was saying as Ellis came up.

"What's the matter?" asked Ellis.

The three bowed respectfully, and Griffin said, "It's about this onion plant—they turned out to be Spanish onions, and the Queen wanted Bermudas. Oh dear, we'll all be beheaded for this. You can't fool the Queen—she knows her onions."

Just then, Golub called out, "The Queen! The Queen!" and they all prostrated themselves on the ground.

Immediately came a blare of trumpets. Who should be approaching but George Leopoulos, Edward Meyer, and Theodore Keller in paper caps, blowing little tin horns with red, white, and blue paper streamers!

After them came the children of the court, Reta Hockenberry and Clarence Hechler came tripping up the walk hand in hand. Next came Harry Paige and Ruth Kendall throwing mud at each other. Every now and then Ellen McAlpine, clad in starched nurse's uniform, admonished them to be careful as there was not much mud. After the nurse came Edmund O'Connor sedately reading history, apparently enthralled by the charming story.

After the children came the royal guests and then the king and queen.

Ellis followed them into a large building with white pillars. But when he started to open the inner door, three figures, undeniably those of policemen, garbed in scarlet velvet trimmed with gold lace, blocked his way. "Why!" he exclaimed, "Don't you remember me?" "It's Doug Ellis," said the figures in chorus. Doug certainly was glad that the trio had turned out to be Michael Megliola, Clayton Donaldson, and Harold Dorenbaum. They told Ellis he could go in if he was very quiet. Gerald Locke was being tried for stealing the Queen's tarts. In an aeroplane suspended over the jury sat the King and Queen of Hearts. "Why it's Betty Reid and Leslie Adams!" he cried.

While he was thus soliloquizing, Queen Betty called out, "Off with his head!" But when she recognized Ellis, she had a special chair placed on the wing of the aeroplane for him so that he could see everything that went on.

Sitting in the back where they couldn't hear anything and thus would give an unbiased opinion, sat the jury.

Almost the whole court was a gathering of former Centralites, but the jury was entirely so. Frank Baker, looking very affluent and happy, was the chairman. Next to him, snickering at a funny poem composed by Gertrude Moran, the modern Edgar Guest, was Henry Berman, still the same. Helen Barlow, the equestrienne of the Swell-Stuff circus sat up very stern and straight. Julia Carey of Hodskins Company, Betty Hodskins, President, looked pitily at the weeping prisoner. Vincent Tremonti, after having told his neighbor, Hazel Robar, ballet dancer in the Patricia Keefe Dancing Troupe, to wake him up in time to go home, settled himself for a nap. Evelyn and Eleanor Barris giggled at a note Reginald Beauvais, tenor, had sent Eunice Deitz, soprano of the Ruth Sullivan and Marguerite Shannon Company for musicians. One one side sat Harriet Gibbs, star reporter of the Edward Blackmun Scandal Weekly.

The lawyer for the people was John Martin. Barbara Beatty and Webster Eldredge, her assistant, were fighting with great zeal for the life of the poor prisoner. Dorothy Fenner, court usher, conducted Donald Wyman, President of the French Department, down the aisle to the place where Betty Beckwith sat reading How We Girls Do It by Gertrude Skinner and Cecilia Standish. Barbara Rogers, her hair a glossy black, whispered shrilly across the courtroom to Dorothy Hjelm and Dorothy Rickman who were looking soulfully at a picture of Kenneth Gridley, the football star. From time to time Ruth Kenworthy went and dried the tears of the luckless accused with silk handkerchiefs supplied by Gertrude Sullivan and Mildred Tomlinson.

In the row in front of him, Ellis saw Mabel Dole and Kathryn Masco. Mabel was whispering to Kathryn: "Now, when I do it, hurry up and call him quickly." Mabel swooned gracefully. Immediately Kathryn dashed to the rear where William MacMartin was sitting with Benjamin Shapiro. He grabbed his medicine bag from beneath the feet of Carolyn Prowler who, in her anxiety to speak to Madeline Kane, had twisted it around, and dashed down the aisle. Mabel, however, was cured, for William Semanie, the famous aquatic star had trod on her foot. Bernice Wickward, a nurse at the Harriet Sturgis Memorial Hospital was in attendance. At that moment Ellis heard a disturbance. He looked around, and there were Levada Hadley, Helene Maher, and Marion Franklin disturbing the order of the court by their loud voices. Eleanor Underwood blew a shrill whistle and called the trio to order. The judge smiled gratefully at Eleanor. Just then, Ellis rushed down the aisle and dragged Gerald away from the judge. "This is where you get off!" he shouted impudently at the worthy executive. "Off with his head!" bellowed the Queen. The axe descended again and again on poor Ellis's head. Just as the head rolled off, somebody pinched him and said, "Wake up, Douglas, conjugate falloir in all tenses."

Doug woke up.

Prophecy on Prophets

SCENE: Room 214 TIME: 1968

Oh, Mr. Smith, I have something to tell you! You remember Ruth Dickerman, Marcia Maylott, and Eunice Katz, our prophets, you know? Well, we almost ran into them on the thousand ft. level yesterday. Say, but their plane is a speedy little bird! We stopped to talk for a while, although the conversation was more or less difficult against the hum of the helicopters. Right away they began to pat each other on the back, though they didn't need to; for even though we had been at the South Pole growing ice-cream cones, we had heard about such famous people as they. It seems that they are still at the old business of prophesying and pretty successful. Their clientele is mostly '28ers and their posterity. It is only once in awhile that some grouch, having a few hard times, comes back to sling stones, but that plane of theirs is speedy for a purpose. But wait, we're not thru yet. In between all this heavy business, they all have their little hobbies. Ruth, you remember how clever she was, always on the honor roll, has discovered three new constellations and has been to Mars twice besides writing several books about our interesting neighbors there. As for Marcia, another honor pupil, you remember she is the recognized satirical novelist of the day. Her cartoons too, the outgrowths of these little sketches done in French Class, are the talk of all the art critics of the day. And Eunice, well she is—plus. You remember her work on our Blue and White? Well that was nothing compared to her fame now. People from everywhere come to her to straighten out their business tangles. People actually rush from Mars to her office. She is practically the business princess of two planets. Now, aren't you proud of your prodigies?

Class Poem

Dear Central, we may travel far
Ere we return to thee;
Yet in our hearts 'neath stranger star,
You'll always with us be.
The light of new adventure burns;
We're youth that's strong and free;
The soaring soul within us yearns
Great things to do and be.

Ever along life's stony way—
Although we tire and fall—
Your memory will with us stay
To raise us with its call.
There is real sadness in our heart;
We hear our pealing knell;
And we can only, as we part,
Say, "Central High, farewell."

LOUISE M. WAKEMAN

Will of the Class of 1928

We, the Senior Class in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight, of the foundation of the Springfield High School the one hundredth, being of doubtful mind but about to pass out of existence, do hereby make, publish, and declare this to be our last will and testament.

Being only carefree, impoverished, and improvident minors and mendicants, our estate is in Spain and of no more than imaginary value; wherefore we make no disposition thereof. Our right to existence as Seniors, being but a temporary concession from the state, is not at our disposal. These items excepted, all else appertaining to our members we now proceed to will and divide.

Firstly: We bequeath to our esteemed principal, William Colver Hill, all the fear, admiration, reverence, awe, respect, and deference in which we hold him, that when we are gone he may distribute said fear, admiration, reverence, awe, respect, and deference impartially among the incoming Freshmen, in order that said incoming Freshmen may comport themselves with becoming circumspection in his presence.

Secondly: We give back and return to our beloved teachers all the unsolicited advice, information, reproofs, admonitions, and platitudes, which shall at the time of our departure from the afore-mentioned High School, be in, upon, or about our minds and memories, feeling that anything so freely and abundantly given away must be of trifling value and not worth retaining in our minds and memories when we depart as afore-alluded to.

Thirdly: We do give and concede our Edwin E. Smith, paragon of faculty advisers, to Harvard University, to be held in trust for one year. At the end of which time, said item shall be returned, F. O. B., C. O. D., to Central High School, together with the accrued interest in the form of a degree of Master of Arts. We do make this unprecedented concession with the express stipulation that the said University hold the said Mr. Smith in trust for only one year lest incoming classes lose the golden opportunity of making the acquaintance of the said Mr. Smith.

Fourthly: We give and bequeath whatever hidden characteristics may lie concealed under our present vainglorious exterior to all other inmates of this institution, i. e., to the school at large; to wit: to the incumbent Freshmen in order that their present mirth-provoking verdancy may be mitigated with the wisdom of riper years; to the incumbent Sophomores that their blatant sophistication and supercilious demeanor may be modified, be it ever so imperceptibly; and to the present Near-Seniors, that they may worthily uphold the tradition of the scintillating supremacy of the seniors.

Item: "Gawdge" Cavanaugh, the most obvious member of '28, has a cartload of rubbish to dispense with. His rubber bands, mouth organs, and other impedimenta which have earned him the title of "Class Teachers' Pest," he sadly relinquishes to Jack Porte, who may already have a supply of his own, but who will doubtless be overjoyed to receive this addition. "Gawdge's" nerve, both natural and inherited from other classes, he leaves to Milton Brod, not for the purpose of harassing Miss Clark, but in order that said nerve may be used to pep up the school band and inspire Central on to another football championship.

Item: Our "Tiny" Kinsella, littlest and cutest girl, leaves both said qualities to "Al" Burke, that wee boy with the freckles.

Item: Vinnie Tremonti, usually known as the "Little Turk," leaves to all athletic males ever destined to occupy seats in Room 214 the hope that they may never fall ingloriously at the touch of "a mere slip of a girl."

Item: To Elsie Duquette, Harriet Sturgis bequeathes a generous amount of sophistication, in order that Elsie may never again deign to wear such ordinary footgear as Russian boots.

Item: Eunice Deitz, she of the lilting soprano voice, bequeathes said voice to Louise Baab and Joyce Smith that they also may become prima donnas.

Item: To Julia Prindle, Elena Hannigan leaves a large supply of her fastest conversation, liberally sprinkled with lady-like screams. With this addition to her already long line, Julia should experience no difficulty in talking her way through Central.

Item: Nejib Boyajy bequeathes to all aspiring football players the ability to make dreams come true.

Item: "Buzz" Studley leaves his ability to melt the stony hearts of Central's teachers to Bub McAllister, with the suggestion that Bub get the Advisory Board to advise the school to pass the following amendments to its constitution: (1) Abolition of exams, (2) Recognition of language, and (3) Emancipation from study.

Item: To Libby Allison, Betty Reid leaves her reputation as a vamp; also her motto: "Get Your Man!"

Item: Ted Blackmun, our hard-working treasurer, leaves to Gordon Smith the motto: "Dues-Prom Tickets!" with the wish that Gordon may be able to convince his class that it's true.

Item: Marcia Maylott, our cleverest girl, leaves a stock of clever ideas to Dorothy Crockett, just to see if Dorothy could be any more clever than she is now.

Item: Eunice Katz bequeathes all surplus Blue and Whites to the School as a permanent record of her achievement as editor and publisher.

Item: Mary Chellis and Malcolm Foskit leave their very obvious devotion and certain less obvious trysting places in Central's corridors to all other devoted couples, but in particular to Barbara and Bruce and to Genevieve and Elmer.

Item: Walter Brooslin leaves his ability for unflagging industry to Jack Carey, whose ability to sell Recorder ads has put him on the map as the go-gettingest Centralite.

Item: The Barris Twins, Eleanore and Evelyn, individually and collectively, leave their likeness to Barbara Spencer and Ruth Beatty, who, although not twins, are alike in having a plentiful amount of the elusive "it."

Item: Jerry Locke leaves his ability to look serious on occasion, which he seems to have gained this last semester, to Ted Blodgett, who looks that way all the time.

Item: Mae Magriel, our class artist, bequeathes a generous supply of her artistic ability to Roger Bridge that he may win all the poster contests he enters.

Item: Johnnie Mohler leaves his drawl to any underclassman who claims to be as slow as Johnnie (not, of course, at shooting baskets).

Item: Marie Dow leaves her purring purrsonality to Virginia Brock.

Item: Norton Long leaves his propensity for extended philosophical ramblings to Robert Moore and Roger Cushman; Norton wishes that there were someone in Central who knew how to play chess, so that he might leave his title to him.

Item: Doug Ellis and Harlow Gage, the social lions of '28, leave their conquests to Howard Delaney, et al., as they plan to change their field of operations to Denmark—at least temporarily. Their sang froid and their insouciance are to be divided proportionately between MacMillan McElwain and Frank Broeker, two of Central's most collegiate Adonaíses.

Item: Barbara Beatty leaves to Virginia Edson the confidence that the majority of male Centralites do not seem to be gentlemen; at least it is not always blondes they prefer.

Item: Leonard Salter bequeathes his prestige as guardian of the rights of minorities, so oft exhibited in the flaming columns of the Recorder, to Bertram Schatz, with a suggestion that Bertram exercise moderation in his eager pursuit of school scandal.

Lastly, we leave and bequeath to all future classes Mr. Hill's pet quotation, whether you take it seriously or not, and the detention and emergency rooms, time in said rooms being an essential part of every Centralite's education.

In witness whereof we have signed, published, and declared this instrument to be our last will and testament, on this sixteenth day of April, 1928.

(Signed) HARLOW GAGE

Signed, published, and declared by the above named president, as and for the last will and testament of the Class of 1928, in the presence of us, who, at his request, have signed as witnesses to the same.

Class Song

To be sung to the tune of THE SWEETHEART OF SIGMA CHI

Three years gone by,
To Central High
We came, to the dearest school;
Like all the rest
We stood every test
As "Freshies" midst ridicule.
Juniors we became;
We spread our fame
Thruout our Alma Mater's halls.
The years sped fast;
We are seniors at last,
Our gratitude filling its walls.

CHORUS

The time has come
To leave the school,
For in June we have to part.
Each hour with thee
Is a choice memory;
We thank thee with all our heart.
May our friendship last
As it has in the past.
The Class of "28" bids good bye.
Our words cannot tell
What a fond farewell
We owe to you, Central High.

History

After entering Central's corridors in the early part of February, 1926, the Class of '28 $\frac{1}{2}$ soon became well acquainted with the spirit and fun of high school.

This class was the first to win the privilege of having its name engraved on the silver loving-cup in the first semi-annual 1B and 1A Chorus Contest.

In place of the usual 1B social, '28 $\frac{1}{2}$ held in its first semester a very enjoyable picnic.

The class has acquired a banner with the colors rose and silver.

Next, the class held its 1A social, which was a marked success.

The members decided that instead of holding a social in 2B, they would invest all their energy in their Junior Prom, which came on December 16, 1927 and added another page of glory to the history of this class.

A 3B Card Party was held on April 14, 1928. Parents and pupils joined to make this a distinct affair in the annals of Central.

As this book goes to press, plans are being made for a novelty dance to be held on May 11.

Such a fine beginning promises a brilliant ending to the story 1928 $\frac{1}{2}$ has to tell.

History

In its first year at Central, the class of 1929 became well-known by its most successful 1B Social.

No 1A Social was held because the date chosen conflicted with the Senior Prom. During this Semester the class banner of hunter's green and white appeared.

In both semesters this class won the honor of having its name engraved on the silver loving cup in the 1B and 1A Chorus Contest.

The second year of the Class of '29 brought to these Centralites a most enjoyable and well planned 2B Social.

In both 2B and 2A this class gained the privilege of having its name put on the Recorder Banner for Class Supremacy.

The championship in Class Basketball is the latest credit to '29.

The members of this class have become as one in respect to their fine spirit and good will toward the success of '29 and of Central.

As the book goes to press, this class is preparing for a long-to-be-remembered Junior Prom.

History

In the early part of February, 1927, new faces again appeared in the halls of Central. They proved to belong to none other than the Class of 1929 $\frac{1}{2}$.

While only Freshmen, the '29 $\frac{1}{2}$ girls won the annual Gym Meet and had the honor of having the class's name printed on the cup.

Although no date was available for a 1B Social, '29 $\frac{1}{2}$ made up for any loss the next semester in the 1A Social, which was a success both socially and financially.

The class is certain of future success and hopes to add to the glory and honor of Central.

MISS ISABEL M. KAGWIN

History

1930 made its appearance in the fall of 1927 with a class of about 250. Immediately it led the school in the number on the honor lists.

Owing to the delay in getting organized, there was no 1B Social.

As the book goes to press, 1930 is preparing for a 1A Social which promises to make up for the omitted 1B Social.

The class colors are blue and gray.

The Athletic Scholarship Award

FERDINAND McALLISTER

CHARLES OSINSKI

HUBERT WILSON

With the exception of the Magna Cum Laude Pin, the honor most coveted by Central Boys is the Athletic Scholarship Award. This is the gold and enamel C given to the athlete who maintains a B average in all subjects throughout any season during which he is playing on a major school team or whose name is on the honor roll during the most important marking period of that season. Since this award was first offered, in 1927, only five boys have attained it: in 1927, Charles McAllister and Ernest Moore; in 1927-1928, Ferdinand McAllister, Walter Osinski, and Hubert Wilson.

The White Mountains in Winter

Since the Hiland air is very conducive to exercise in the open, Osinski-ing is found to en-Gage many, while, Converse-ly, Reid-ing is almost a lost art. The new toboggan chute, nearly perpendicular, with a hard Bump on the bottom, is called "Studley's Comet," altho Nolman but woman was the first to try it alone. It is reported that she Broeker wrist on landing.

"O-ber-r-r!" cry some, "all Snow and ice!" "True," reply others, "but healthy." A motion picture was taken of a group of Fellows, who after Leison a toboggan were towed along, Neylon on it, by a fast horse. On a clear day, one may Se-manie enthusiasts, girls with Lepper-d coats, and men, garbed in Fisher-Men's rigs, waiting for Sleighs. Lumber-Jack-ing is of great interest to all. The men choose a huge pine, Hewitt, and send it crashing from Gray skies to the ground with a Clapp like thunder. "Wy-man!" exclaimed one thrilled on-looker, it's Steup-endous!" There would have Benner far greater number of Canadian yachtsmen at the resort but for the fact that there are laws which Bar-dacks from permitting boats entering without considerable "red tape" because it is feared that someone Mi-land-er cargo of illegal goods. However, the crowd was sufficiently large and select to insure a Good time for all.

Changing the Rule of Central through the "Recorder" Forum

April 6. To the Forum:

I am a member of the senior class. I think my class is about the poorest job of democracy there is on earth. A cheap gang is running our class. Give me liberty, or I'll transfer to Tech.

(Signed) Whatsis

April 13. To the Forum:

I am not a member of the senior class. I don't agree with "Whatsis." Anyhow, I like the exalted flop of your class. I think that a guy like "Whatsis" who doesn't sign his name is a sour, lowdown, pie-faced, moth-eaten idiot. However, I withhold my name from print.

(Signed) Not Much

April 27. To the Forum:

I am a member of the senior class. Maybe I agree with "Whatsis" and maybe I don't. Who cares? Yet I am inclined to think that everyone should sign his name to his forum letters, like John Hancock signed the Declaration of Independence.

(Signed) John Z. Bananas

May 18. To the Forum:

I think that the paper is wasting too much space over the senior class. Who cares about the senior class? I don't; so no one does! etc. etc. etc. et al—(for about three columns).

(Signed) Joe M. Bush

May 25. To the Forum:

I think that as "Whatsis" said some months ago, Central has no democracy. Because of this, I have delved into the subject. You remember that Jack Horner put in his thumb and pulled out a plum—remember? Well, I want to know what that has to do with the subject. Anyhow, I sent a questionnaire to over one thousand of our 985 students concerning high school democracy, asking, "Has Central Any Democracy?" and received the following data:

Yes.....	21
No.....	17
With ice-cream.....	9
*Boston Red Sox.....	25
Literary Digest.....	3
† Maybe.....	17
Democrat.....	6
Against Prohibition.....	770

*Does not run on Sundays or holidays.

†Through sleeper on Tuesdays.

Aren't you convinced that "Whatsis" might have been right?

(Signed) So-So

June 1. NOTICE:

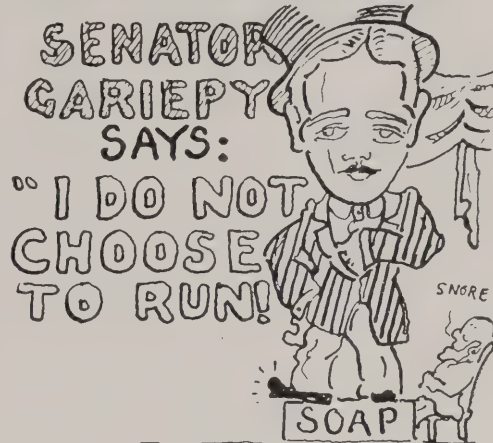

Having accomplished the purpose of making Central a democratic school, and since many contributors have established a considerable number of definite conclusions, this paper will not publish any more letters unless they cover this subject.

(Signed) Quintus Z. Catulus, Editor

Notes Explaining the Suicide

Now, where's my blotter? Who would want to swipe a measly little blotter? Everybody here knows my pen leaks, too. Everybody ought to know. Everybody uses it. When they do let me use my own pen they pull a dirty trick like swiping my blotter! Anyone would think that blotters were expensive. To think anyone would swipe anything that they give away! Give away! Beg you to take!

And I wanted to do a neat job on this paper. How can I do a neat job with a leaky pen and no blotter? Nobody cares for me. Nobody is interested whether I make good or not. I've a notion to go away; I'll go some place where I won't see a soul. Nobody'd care. They wouldn't even come to see me off. As soon as I was out of sight they'd go through all the drawers in my desk and swipe all my blotters. Well, I won't go away. I'll stay home and find the crook who stole my blotter if I have to play detective for the rest of my life. I'll show them. I'll collect all the blotters I can lay my hands on and put them in my room and lock the door and lose the key.

Look at that blot! It makes me feel like busting right out and having a good bawl. Here am I slaving, trying to put out a good paper with a leaky pen—and everyone else out having a good time—playing Blotter, Blotter, Who's Got the Blotter? And it's my blotter. I'll start a blotter factory, that's what I'll do. I'll give them all a blotter and a leaky pen for Christmas; then I hope they'll be satisfied.

Got Your Number

If you can answer the majority of these questions in the affirmative, look on page 128 for Dr. Voxpopuli's analysis of your personality.

1. Do you like to do homework?
2. Have you ever given someone else your place in the lunch line?
3. Do you always bring back your report card to school on time?

4. Do you refrain from talking when passing to assembly?

5. Do you save your pennies to put in the Welfare Board bank?

6. Do you attend all the basketball games, football games, etc.?

7. Do you know the sense of these questions?

An Ideal Day

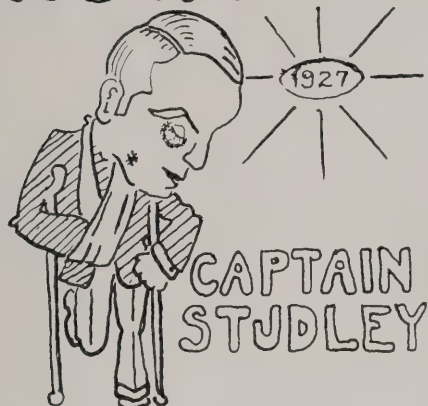

One morning this Centralite awoke at seven o'clock, found all his clothes with ease, and entered the breakfast room in plenty of time to enjoy a hearty breakfast of waffles and pure maple syrup.

Upon entering Central's portals, after a brisk walk to school, he found the 6th and 7th periods were to be omitted—quite a coincidence, as our boy friend had omitted studying the homework for those subjects. As first one on the lunch line, our hero had no difficulty in securing a very satisfactory meal. Because of the irregularity of the periods, the flustered teachers neglected to assign any homework for the week-end. Back home again, he found two letters from a "coupla" blondes.

Well folks, this is station F. O. B., to-morrow night, our Kind friend Nurse Jane Fuzzy-Wuzzy will oblige us with another fairy bedtime story. Signing off—good night.

LETTER GOLF—THE RULES

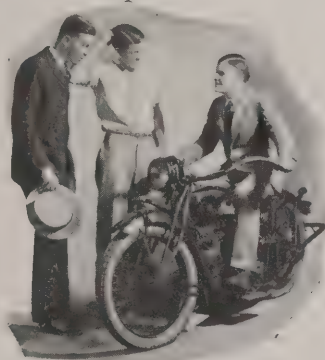

1. The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

2. You can change only one letter at a time.

3. You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.

4. The order of letters cannot be changed. The solution appears on page 143.

"SAY, FELLOWS, IT WAS EASY!"

LISTEN! Each week I spent less of my allowance on movies and other amusements and before I knew it, I had saved the initial payment on my Indian Scout. Since I've had my Indian I've been paying for it while I ride in the carfares I save. I'm able to get up later and still get to school on time. I feel better because I'm out in the air every day and I think clearer. An Indian Scout is the best investment a schoolboy can make. You fellows are sure passing up a healthful, invigorating sport by not placing your allowance towards an investment like this.
